As Mayor, I took the oath of office and promised to be a visionary, to develop strategies, to proactively address problems, to see the Town not just as it is, but as what it can be for future generations to come, and to push through striking changes that can positively affect this Town for decades to follow. The well-being and the quality of life of the entire community are my priorities, and I have promised to lead the community into and triumphantly through challenges, not to shy away from them. ABOUT OUR TOWN

The Town of Dumfries has a history of innovation and prosperity.

Dumfries history began as early as 1690 when Richard Gibson erected a gristmill on Quantico Creek. A customhouse and warehouse followed in 1731, and many other cropped up along the estuary by 1732. Prince William County was formed and took its name from Prince William Augustus, the second son of King George II of England.

The Town was formally established on 60 acres of land at the head of the harbor of Quantico Creek, provided by John Graham. He named the town after his birthplace, Dumfrieshire, Scotland. After much political maneuvering, the General Assembly established Dumfries as the first of seven townships in the county. Dumfries received its charter on May 11, 1749 – making it the oldest continuously chartered town in Virginia.

Dumfries was the second leading port in Colonial America receiving tobacco from the upland, and rivaled New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

Since the colonial period our Town has long been recognized as a location for business and is part of one of the fastest growing areas in the Greater Washington Metropolitan Region.

In addition to our strategic location, the Town of Dumfries is a pleasant place to live, offering friendly neighborhoods, an affordable cost of living, close proximity to excellent health care, outstanding educational opportunities, and a vast range of historical, cultural and leisure activities. The rich history of the Town combined with our geographical location, and quality of life, makes our community an ideal location to do business and a wonderful place to live.

It's more than quality of life – it is the quality of place that makes our community unique. We are located in close proximity to a vast offering of amenities including:

- Arts, Culture and Entertainment
- Healthcare
- Schools
- Recreation
- Sporting Events (professional and minor league)
- Community Events
- Shopping
- Dining

Weems-Botts Museum (www.historicdumfries.com)

The museum was once home to Mason Locke Weems, the first biographer of George Washington, including the well known anecdote about Washington as a youth barking his father's cherry tree "I cannot tell a lie" and throwing a stone across the Rappahannock. These stories helped to make George Washington a national hero for all time.

HISTORIC SITES

William's Ordinary (www.historicdumfries.com)

During the colonial times, the Ordinary was known as Williams Ordinary. Over the years it was also known as Love's Tavern, the Stage Coach Inn, and others. During the Civil War, the building was used as a Confederate Headquarters during the blockade of D.C. along the Potomac River.

Henderson House

The Henderson House was home to Archibald Henderson, the fifth and longest-serving commandant of the Marine Corps. The "Granddaddy of the Marine Corps" served for over 38 years. Alexander lived in Dumfries until his death on November 22, 1815. The Henderson House, according to his will, was to be sold with the town lots following the death of his wife, which occurred on December 14, 1816.

During the Civil War, the house was used as a hospital. Then, the upper rooms were used as large wards numbered 1 through 4. "Be quiet" was painted on the stairway. Also during the war, the coping at one corner of the house was torn away by cannon fire. The house is now a private residence.

Quantico National Cemetery

Quantico National Cemetery is located on land that was part of the U.S. Marine Corps training base adjacent to Quantico in Prince William County, Va. The land has been used by the military for over 200 years, first, around 1775 by the Commonwealth of Virginia for Navy operations, and later, as a blockade point for the Confederate army during the Civil War.

A: Yes, if the fence is over (4) feet high. No fence over eight (8) feet high is permitted. You need to complete a building permit application and provide a recent survey/plat of your property with the fence drawn on it. The Town’s building permit application can be downloaded from the website.

Yes, if the shed is greater than 150 square feet in size you need a building permit. Regardless of the size of the shed, however, you need to provide the Zoning Administrator with information as to where the shed will be located on your property. A recent survey/plat of your property with the shed drawn to scale is required.

Do I need a permit for installing a sign?

Yes, in most cases. A business must obtain a permit for a wall or free-standing sign. In addition, a permit for a temporary sign or banner must be obtained for signs advertising a grand opening or special sale. The Town’s building permit application has a section for signs. If the business is located in the Town’s Historic Overlay District, in addition to a sign permit, a Certificate of Appropriateness application has to be approved by the Town’s Architectural Review Board.

Do I need a permit for a deck?

Yes. A building permit is required and the Zoning Administrator must review the application to verify that the location and size of the deck conforms to the Town’s zoning regulations.

What do I need to do if I am making improvements to a building located in the Town’s Historic Overlay District?

If the work involves improvements to the exterior of a building in the Historic District or involves demolition or moving of an existing building or constructing a new building, a Certificate of Appropriateness application must be submitted to the Town’s Architectural Review Board for review and approval. In addition, if a commercial sign is erected on your property, a Certificate of Appropriateness application has to be submitted.
